PROJECTS

Student Counselling Form Web Application

This project is a simple web application developed using HTML and CSS to collect student counselling details. The form allows students to enter their personal and academic information through structured input fields. The entered data is displayed in a clear and organized format. This project helped in understanding basic web development and form design concepts.

Programming Language Prediction using Naive Bayes Algorithm

This project predicts the programming language of a given code snippet using the Naive Bayes machine learning algorithm. The system analyzes keywords and patterns in the code to classify the language. The model was implemented using Python and the Scikit-learn library. A simple interface was developed using Flask, HTML, and CSS to allow users to input code and view the prediction.
